Follow your Passion

- Follow your passion and understand the importance of persistence, the value of encouragement and the need to stay on course and to get self-motivated.
- Now the thing is take a step back and honestly check whether your passion reflects your capability.
- Capability refers to doing something really well.

Opportunity- Missed or Taken

- You might have missed 10 legitimate skills that you have that other people or even companies or employers are willing to pay for, which you didn't know about or you didn't know even existed.
- Look around and evaluate what other capability that you are really good at, the things you deliver and the things that people praise you because you do very well.
- In retirement planning you want to retire from something to doing something.

Happiness

- When people say you follow your passion, naturally you will have happiness in your job.
- Your happiness comes from making a difference in people's life.
- Your happiness comes from being appreciated by your clients and being respected by the people around or by the people who appreciate your service, your expertise and also adding value to people's life and solving people's equations and problems.
- These are the things that really deliver happiness.

Doing Your Best Work

- Wisely manage your passion and capability.
- Passion is too important to be without but it is too fickle to follow blindly around.
- Also consider your capability. Never get blind by a passion but always bring it together.
- Something that you can do really well is something the world needs and it is something people are willing to pay you for.
